10-12 February, 2025

1st Announcement

The Poultry Research Foundation, in conjunction with WPSA - Australian Branch, cordially invites you to attend the:

36th Annual Australian Poultry Science Symposium

to be held at

*The University of Sydney - Abercrombie Business School
(Camperdown Campus)*

12:00pm Monday 10th -
5:00pm Wednesday 12th, 2025

The Australian Poultry Science Symposium is the premier avian science conference in Australia, attracting delegates from right across the country and around the world. This year our conference will focus on an over-arching theme of:

"Enhancing productivity through resilience."

We have decided that the event will again be exclusively FACE-TO-FACE, however we are investigating the possibility of being able to provide a virtual recorded version, which would be released at the conclusion of the conference, enabling anyone who could not attend the event in Sydney to review the presentations and discussions post-event.

The move back to University Campus was a decision made to strengthen the relationship between the conference and the University, with the state of the art facilities at the Business School offering us a larger tiered lecture theatre, as well as more smaller spaces for side-meetings and ample room for socialising and networking at the event.

The program will again officially begin at mid-day on Monday, with check-in for the symposium opening at 9am. As always, APSS will continue to include an excellent array of invited speakers to feature at the event, as well provide our delegates plenty of time to network and socialise by offering a lively social program.

SAVE THE DATES & START WRITING UP YOUR PAPERS, WE LOOK FORWARD TO SEEING EVERYONE NEXT FEBRUARY.
